RAY EAMES

a century of modern design

Developed in partnership with Eames Office, the exhibit is the first to explore Ray's early life in Sacramento and work prior to meeting Charles in 1941, based upon new research conducted by Carla Hartman, Education Director of Eames Office. In addition, highlights of contributions to furniture, architecture, films, toys, photography, textiles, exhibit design and more produced by Ray and Charles from 1941-1988 are also chronicled, revealing new insight on her ground-breaking role as Charles' equal partner at Eames Office.

Featuring over 100 original works and rarely-seen artifacts from the Eames family's collection, the exhibit provides new perspective on Ray's 60-year career in the arts as one of the 20th century's most influential yet largely unknown artists, whose influence continues to shape design today.
