Name: _____ Date: _____ Class: _____

STANDARDS: CCSS.RI.5.1, 5.7; History-Social Science 5.7

INSTRUCTIONS: After their incarceration, many Japanese Americans fought for their right to redress (the act of correcting a wrongdoing, allowed by the U.S. Constitution). In 1988, almost 50 years later, President Ronald Reagan signed the Civil Liberties Act, requiring the U.S. government to issue an apology and payment of $20,000 to each internee who was still alive.

Explore the Museum to find two people who have fought for their rights or the rights of others, then answer the following questions.
Hint: California's Remarkable Women and the California Hall of Fame are great exhibits to look in!
